VCEA HISTORY

ACCREDITATION OF SCHOOLS

Since its inception, the 77 Catholic schools in Virginia have been successfully guided through the VCEA's accreditation process, Design for Excellence. In each case, the school community has completed a comprehensive self-study of its goals and how well its curriculum, student services, finances and facilities allow the school to achieve its goals. After the school has completed the self-study, a team of educators, not connected with the school, visits the school to judge the validity of the self-study and to suggest avenues of growth. Schools which successfully complete this process are accredited by the VCEA. The Diocese of Richmond decided to withdraw from this accrediting agency. As of July 1, 2016 the association will be known as VCEA – Diocese of Arlington.

PUBLIC POLICY ISSUES

Representatives of the VCEA have met with local, state and national legislators, testified at legislative committees of the Virginia General Assembly, and served on task forces on a variety of public policy issues. These include child care regulation, transportation of school children, federally-funded remedial programs, and funding for asbestos abatement.

History of VCEA Accreditation Process

The Virginia Catholic Education Association was formed in 1986 at the initiative of the two Catholic school superintendents in the State of Virginia, Dr. Lois King Draina of the Diocese of Richmond and Rev. William F. Davis, OSFS, of the Diocese of Arlington. The primary responsibility of VCEA was to oversee the self-study process for accreditation of schools in the Diocese of Arlington and Richmond. The Association created and successfully implemented the Design for Excellence Program.

Acknowledging the continued need to maintain a process that would encourage school communities to confront the diverse approaches to creating a learning community for the 21st century, in 1993 the VCEA accreditation committee accepted the task of revising the Design for Excellence process. In 1994, the first draft of the revised Design for Excellence was written. The format was a response to a shifting paradigm of learning. This new approach demanded an integrated strategy to the formation of a Christ-centered learning environment already immersed in a rapidly changing technological society. The shifting of society into an era of interdependency required schools to recognize the unique ways individuals learn and to design an educational process that creates an environment which fosters creative, challenging, and ever-changing responses to the ultimate goal of academic excellence.

In 1995-96, the revised Design for Excellence was piloted by Holy Spirit School, Diocese of Arlington and St. Edward-Epiphany School, Diocese of Richmond. In 1996-97, the final revisions were made and the new document published. The March 1997 Accreditation Workshop for all school administrators in both diocese is a reflection of the VCEA continued commitment to promote excellence in Catholic education.

During the 1999-2000 school year, the Design for Excellence instrument was updated to meet the requirements of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, thus enabling the high schools to seek accreditation through the Design for Excellence process. The Virginia Secondary and Middle Schools Committee acknowledged acceptance of the DFE document as a criteria for School Improvement in October 2001.

During the 2005-2006 school year, the Arlington Diocese revised the Design for Excellence instrument. The Richmond Diocese pursued the SACS District Model, developing the Design for Growth instrument/process for accrediting schools.

Given the fact that there are a number of excellent K-12 accreditation programs throughout the country, and acknowledging the diversity of our Catholic schools in the Commonwealth, the VCEA Executive Board respects the autonomy of both dioceses and thus endorses the use of Design for Excellence (DFE), Design for Growth (DFG) and the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) processes.

The Diocese of Richmond decided to withdraw from this accrediting agency. As of July 1, 2016 the association will be known as VCEA – Diocese of Arlington.
